Mr Walden advised that the preparation works for the Commercial Quay Project would commence tomorrow. The entire works area would be cordoned off, for security and health and safety reasons, and public access restricted. New road markings and traffic signs would be erected, vehicular traffic in Braye Street would become two-way and parking would be limited. The collection of freight would also be strictly controlled. Mr Walden confirmed that the works would take 18 months and appealed for public co-operation during this time, requesting that any concerns or issues regarding access to the harbour area be directed to the Harbour Office. Mr Walden advised that the pontoon would be in place next week. It was anticipated that the progress of the new Commercial Quay would be made available for viewing, via web cams, on the Government web site.

The President gave his congratulations and compliments, on behalf of the States, to those crew members of the RNLI who had received the highly respected award "Thanks of the Institute of Vellum" and Vellum Service Certificates.

Mr Cox announced that with great regret he would be resigning from the States at the end of the month.

Mr Cox advised that this was not a political decision; he had accepted a position to carry out research for a Doctorate at Kings College, London with some research being carried out in Australia. Mr Cox thanked those members of the electorate who had voted him on to the States.

The President expressed his thanks to Mr Cox, on behalf of the States, for all the work he had done over the years as a States Member, particularly in Tourism and wished him every success for the future.
